SYNOPSIS

A satirical comedy that warns the viewer of the dangers of bisexual women, SHADY BI is filmed in the style of 1950s educational films that cautioned teenagers against drug use or engaging in pre-marital sex.

FILMMAKER BIO

April Faith Hirschman was first introduced to the love of cinema by her father, an avid video collector. Hirschman's first film project came out of a gallery art show where the curator gave everyone a frame to fill with art of her choice. Hirschman's frame later appeared in her first short movie, a project about Frida Kahlo entitled "Bood and Monkey." This film won the "Best Short Film" award at San Francisco Videofest for 2006 and also showed as an audience favorite at the Berkeley Women of Color Film Festival in 2001. "Shady Bi" is Hirschman's second film. Currently, Hirschman is working on a number of feature film scripts.
